

The Healing Dreams of Asclepius:
The Art of Growing Back our Hands

“Truth, naked and cold, had been turned away from every door in the village. Her nakedness frightened the people. When Parable found her she was huddled in a corner, shivering and hungry. Taking pity on her, Parable gathered her up and took her home. There she dressed Truth in Story, warmed her, and sent her out again. Clothed in Story, Truth knocked at the villagers’ doors and was readily welcomed into people’s houses. They invited her to eat at their table and to warm herself by their fire.”
